Do You Like Animals?

...Really Big Animals?

Journey Imaged is partnering with the Elephant Nature Park in Chiang Mai, Thailand and Leisure Travel Artist's Debbie Kessler in offering a very limited and affordable life changing two week journey to a select group of travelers.

Participation

In addition to experiencing the joy of Chiang Mai, its festivals, and the 13th century capital of the Mangrai Dynasty: Chiang Rai, the group will spend six days working with the rescued animals at the Elephant Nature Park. Each day helping prepare the elephants food, having the satisfaction of feeding them and the moving experience of watching the delight they have bathing together in the river. All this happens while learning about the animals in their natural habitat, and sharing the process with volunteers from around the world.

Give and Get

So, one gives of time, but what does one receive in return? Other than the obvious, the travel to exotic locations, being part of a different culture, etc, there will be two photographers, documenting the group's entire Elephant Nature Park adventure. Each traveler will receive their own, personalized photo journal after returning home, plus access to Fine Art at a reduced cost. However, the real benefit of this journey is the memories of helping these amazing animals.
