

Cutlines for Dr. John McCosker event January 6, 2018 at Leshar Center for the Arts.

DSC_0847.jpg: Dr. John McCosker, the Emeritus Chair of the Department of Aquatic Biology at the California Academy of Sciences, meets Lindsay Wildlife's animal ambassadors Swainsons' Hawk Valkyrie at the Leshar Center for the Arts before his presentation on Great White Sharks. Dr. McCosker presented on the threats to great white sharks Saturday Jan. 6 as part of Lindsay Wildlife's Conservation Icons speaker series.

DSC_0858.jpg: Lindsay Wildlife Volunteer Raptor Handler Amy Eber presents Great-Horned Owl Bubo to meet guests as they arrive January 6, 2018 at Conservation Icons held at the Leshar Center for the Arts. Dr. John McCosker, the Emeritus Chair of the Department of Aquatic Biology at the California Academy of Sciences, presented to a packed crowd on the threats to great white sharks.

DSC_0972.jpg: Guests pose with a shark enthusiast (and Lindsay Wildlife hospital volunteer Ted Vomacka) before Dr. John McCosker, the Emeritus Chair of the Department of Aquatic Biology at the California Academy of Sciences, presented to a packed crowd on the threats to great white sharks at the Leshar Center for the Arts on January 6 for Lindsay Wildlife's Conservation Icons.

untitled-5261.jpg: Dr. John McCosker (left), the Emeritus Chair of the Department of Aquatic Biology at the California Academy of Sciences, poses with Lindsay Wildlife Executive Director Cheryl McCormick (right) at the January 6, 2018 Conservation Icons speaker series held at the Leshar Center for the Arts. Dr. McCosker presented to a packed crowd on the threats to great white sharks.

untitled-5351.jpg: Dr. John McCosker, the Emeritus Chair of the Department of Aquatic Biology at the California Academy of Sciences, presented to a packed crowd on the threats to great white sharks Saturday Jan. 6 as part of Lindsay Wildlife's Conservation Icons speaker series.

untitled-5352-Pano.jpg: Dr. John McCosker, the Emeritus Chair of the Department of Aquatic Biology at the California Academy of Sciences, presented to a packed crowd on the threats to great white sharks Saturday Jan. 6 as part of Lindsay Wildlife's Conservation Icons speaker series.

untitled-5353.jpg: Dr. John McCosker, the Emeritus Chair of the Department of Aquatic Biology at the California Academy of Sciences, presented to a packed crowd on the threats to great white sharks Saturday Jan. 6 as part of Lindsay Wildlife's Conservation Icons speaker series.

Lindsay
Wildlife
Experience

untitled-5381.jpg: Dr. John McCosker, the Emeritus Chair of the Department of Aquatic Biology at the California Academy of Sciences, presented to a packed crowd on the threats to great white sharks Saturday Jan. 6 as part of Lindsay Wildlife's Conservation Icons speaker series.

###

About Lindsay Wildlife Experience:

Lindsay connects people with wildlife to inspire responsibility and respect for the world we share. A unique natural history and environmental education center where live wild animals are just inches away from visitors, Lindsay serves more than 100,000 children and adults each year. Home to the first wildlife rehabilitation hospital established in the U.S., Lindsay treats more than 5,600 animals annually.